"KILLING" THE TREATY

The cuckhoo press continues to cry about the "killing" of the peace treaty.

Notwithstanding t he New Freedom smoke screen the fact remains that the treaty was killed by President Wilson. Europe knew, all well-informed Americans knew, his followers in the Senate knew, that the instrument could not be ratified except with the reservations adopteed by the majority including members of his own party. He preferred to kill it rather than tolerate this exercise of the constitutional right of the Senate and he said so in writing.

Of couse every one wishes the peace t reaty had been signd long ago. It would have been signed and out of the way if Mr. Wilson had not so written in his League of Nations plan that they could not be separated and the one passed without adopting the other. What should have been done was not done. A peace treaty—that and nothing more—should have been given to the Senate for ratification. After that Mr. Wilson could propose his League of Nations scheme.

The reason the peace treaty has not been approved by the Senate is because Senators and people will not join in the League of Nations of the kind proposed. That is the only reason. Newspapers that favor the Wilson plan should tell the facts: The treaty was not beaten but the League plan was knocked out. It was knocked out because Mr. Wilson determined to have his way at all hazards, was too proud to compromise—as he will have to do later—and take his stand as an American for reservations which were purely American in their character, designed solely to Amricanize the treaty and make it safe for the United States —Uniontown Herald.

Fake Outrages

William O. Jenkins, the United States consul at Pueblo, Mexico, who was kidnapped for ransom recently, has been placed under arrest by the authorities of that town on the charge of connivance with his kidnapper, twelve peons having sworn that they knew of the existence of a friendly understanding between Jenkins and Cordova, the bandit who carried him off. This will be very generally pronounced incredible and it may be wholly untrue, yet it brings to mind the curious fact that when the two kidnapped aviators were ransomed last summer the man appointed to receive the money was said to be an American. If there are Americans who want to bring on war between the United States and Mxico, they could doubtless easily produce border outrages and kidnappings with a view to inflame the home public. For there are plenty of "soldiers of fortune" of the semi-bandit type south of the Rio Grande whose services could doubtless be secured for a small outlay.

The Mexicans may be fools and the outrages may be genuine, but faked kidnappings and "cooked" border raids are readily susceptible of reasonable explanation. There are Americans with large mining and other investments south of the Rio Grande who are said to look forward to the annexation of northern Mexico, as both necessary and inevitable. If these are in a hurry to see that section stablilized by means of such a political change, it would be but human for them to favor the faking and "cooking" suggested. In these times even a war with Mexico might not be followed by the desired annexation, but again it is but human to think from the past rather than from either the known present or the probable future. Though there may have been no diliberate hatching of border disturbance it is difficult to explain some of the happenings in any other way.

A "SPORT" THOUGH A "DRY"

The popular idea of a "dry" among "wets" is that he is a sour-visaged tyrant eager to tread down the freedom as well as the rights of others and that there is absolutely nothing of the good sport in his makeup, for a good sport is willing to live and let live, good-humoredly takes things as they come, and can cheerfully endure even a practical joke at his own expense. Most "wets" will therefore be surprised to learn that "Pussyfoot" Johnson has been saluted as a "game sport" by the wettest of Britishers, who, after mobbing him, have now decided to give him a dinner as well as a respectful hearing—all because he proved himself to be "a game sport" than which nothing is so sure of British admiration.

When Johnson, the American prohibition campaigner, was mobbed at one of his London meetings, something struck him in the eye and his eyeball was ruptured. Instead of raging and denouncing he treated the whole affair as a joke and good humoredly said he bore the rough crowd mostly college boys no ill will. In consequence he became the most talked of man in London and the Lord Chanceellor referred to the incident in a public speech. As for the college boys concerned, they announce that as soon as "Pussyfoot" is out of the hospital they will give him a dinner as a mark of respect as well as by way of atonement. The British though "Pussyfoot" was only a meddling prohibitionist, but finding to their surprise that he is a "game sport" they like him

WOMEN IN POLITICS

Political forecasting, says an observer of the recent election in New York, b ecomes a lost art with the advent of women as voters. He speaks as one familiar with American politics and admits that they "voted well and in the main, wisely;" but they failed to vote as the same number of men might reasonably have been expected to. One could not say, for example that they would vote Republican because their fathers had voted Republican, and they quite evidently failed to vote Democratic because a Democratic administration had, just bfore election, appointed a woman to an important position. Broadly speaking t hey appeared to make up their minds independently of party arguments and emblems: and although many voted as did their men folk it is the opinion of this observer that they voted according to their own judgment. This new electorate, he thinks, is "bigger already, better very probably, but oh how different!" One gathers an odd impression that one element in the difference is that women vote more impersonally and are less affected by political emotionalism.

The amusing story is told of Lafayette that when he shook hands with a lot of people in Pittsburg in 1824 he asked of a man in the line: "Are you married" On receiving an affirmative answer the distinguished Frenshman commented: "Happy fellow." The next man in line having confessed that he was a bachelor. "Lucky dog," whispered tactful Lafayette.

A former German Vice Chancellor has been fined 300 marks for refusing to answer a suestion put to him by a committee of the National Assembly. Few secrets will be dragged to light at that r ate, for the German mark, worth about 25 cents in 1914, is now down to a fraction over 2 cents.

The Canadians cool themselves with ice cream and the Mexicans heat themselves with pepper more than any other two peoples in the world. Yet snowy Canada would seem to need the pepper and tropic Mexico the ice cream. You never can tell.

The sailor who slept for 51 days under a house in Norfolk, Va., may have concluded that the best way to beat the high cost of living is to follow the example of hibernating animals.

A newspaper correspondent boldly refers to himself as "an American of several hundrerd years' standing," yet recently it was generally conceded that a Kentuckian aged 131 was far and away the oldest American.

That fearfully absurd word, "literature," is now employed even in connection with the stuff carted off in trucks from raided I. W. W. offices.

DAY OF FORTY-EIGHT HOURS

Fact About Measurement of Time With Which Some May Not Be Thoroughly Familiar.

Dr. Willis E. Johnson, in his work on "Mathematical Geography," shows that "portions of three days may exist at the same time between 11:30 o'clock a. m. and 12:30 o'clock p. m., London time. When it is Monday noon at London Tuesday has begun at Cape Deshnef, but Monday morning has not yet dawned at Attu Island. Nearly half an hour of Sunday still remains there." What is known as the "International Date Line" divides the days from one another—this being situated on the one hundred and eightieth meridian. This runs due north and south, but there are two slight changes which have been made in it, for the sake of convenience.

While a day at any particular place is 24 hours long, each day lasts on earth at least 48 hours. Any given day, say Christmas, is first counted, as that day just west of the date line. The people just west of the date line, who first hailed Christmas have enjoyed 12 hours of it when it reaches England; 18 hours of it when it reaches central United States, and 24 hours of it, or a whole day, when it begins in western Alaska, just east of the date line. Christmas, then, has existed 24 hours on the globe, but having just begun in western Alaska, it will tarry 24 hours longer among mankind. Owing, however, to the irregularity of the date line, days last more than 49 hours; in fact, 49 hours, 12 minutes.

TO AROUSE HEAVY SLEEPER

Writer Recommends That It Be Done With an Odor, Preferably Not Too Powerful

"What is the best method of waking a soundly sleeping person?" is a question quite a few millions of persons would like to have answered there being few who have not or do not continue to exhaust every scheme and method known to them to rouse some heavy-headed members of their families in time to eat breakfast and get to the office or school on time.

"With an odor, undoubtedly," a well-known physician replied to the question. "The sense of smell is the most easily aroused of any of the five. We have trained ourselves to disregard noises—or else we would get no sleep at all in a city. In the country the same sounds which we utterly disregard in town would awaken us instantly," says the Kansas City Star. "To shake a person is more or less successful, as a rule, but often it serves to only half rouse the sleeper, and he turns over and goes to sleep again, or, if he does wake, he is apt to be in a bad humor. Any really unusual noise is effective, but one can't think of a new noise-making method every morning.

"When an odor is used, however, the sleeper wakes at once—is wide awake. Almost any odor will answer, if not too faint. Perfume of any kind is especially good. Ammonia, camphor—in fact anything with a decided odor, will do, but it should not be too powerful, or the awakening will be violent."

Sense of Taste.

The sensation of taste, while of common and constant experience, is highly complicated in its nature. What is commonly called taste is not a simple sensation at all, but rather a complex. In addition to the actual functioning of the apparatus properly pertaining to the sense of taste, the tongue receives impressions of various other sorts, all of which go to make up this complex. As finally recorded in the consciousness, the taste of any substance has to do with its heat or coolness, perhaps with a mild amount of pain, certainly with astringency or acidity—which are in themselves further complexes of thermic and tactile sensations—and above all with smell. The reader will probably agree that ice cream and coffee are entirely different from their true selves when served at inopportune temperatures; and it is a matter of record that a person of the keenest taste may make the most ludicrous errors if asked, blindfolded and with his nose stopped, to identify substances placed in his mouth.

Not Right Kind of Laughter.

One is tempted sometimes to laugh at another's mishap or disappointment, but the laughter that leaves a sting in someone's heart is not the sort of laughter that helps anyone.

SUIT BROUGHT FOR DAMAGES TO AUTO

J. A. Springer of North Charleroi has brought suit against John Haddad of entleyville to recover $300 alleged damages to the automobile of the defendant as the result of a collision. The accident occurred on October 5, 1919, on the Charleroi-Bentleyville road. The plaintiff was traveling in a Nash machine toward Charleroi. He met the defendant in an auto and when the machine attempted to pass, it is alleged that the rear of the Haddad car skidded into the front of the Springer machine, damaging it to the extent of $300. The road was slippery at the time and the plaintiff claims that he pulled to the extreme right side, leaving about 14 feet passing distance for the defendant. Haddad is charged with reckless driving and running at an excessive rate of speed.

WHALE BLAMED FOR DISEASE

Malady That Attacks the Lungs Is Thus Diagnosed by Prominent Danish Scientist.

The echinococcus disease (caused by a small tapeworm in the liver or lungs), which first made its appearance in Holland, is believed by Dr. Van Deinse to be due originally to whales. The Medical Record quotes from a Dutch scientific paper some of the facts upon which Van Deinse bases this theory.

"It is said that this affection is endemic in Iceland and that it eventually reached Friesland from that locality. Not only Friesland was attacked in the eighteenth century, but many other seaports along the North sea and English channel. The connecting link appeared to be the whale fisheries, originally a Basque industry, with headquarters at Bordeaux. In the seventeenth century the channel ports engaged in the whale-catching industry. Friesland, possibly infected from Iceland, also engaged in whaling, appeared to be a distributing point of the infection.

"Not only whales, but also seals and other Arctic fauna, were perhaps infected with echinococcus disease, which was conveyed directly to mankind when in starving seasons they ate this flesh and to dogs and cats in the same manner, the animals then serving as hosts for the parasite along with mankind. In time this maritime industry went out of use. Recollections of old whalers, however, testify to the custom of taking dogs along on whale ships, so that dogs could become infected aboard ship and menace the home dwellers."

TRACED DESCENT OF HORSE

Horses of the miocene tertiary times, and during the pliocene age, which came later, roamed around the marshes of Oregon, according to Professor Condon of the University of Oregon. A letter which the professor wrote a woman in Nashville, Ore., thirty years ago, has been discovered, in which he referred to some of his own specimens of the early horse.

"There were in Oregon three or four species of the small horse," the professor wrote. "I have fragments of many individuals of several of these species. The one of which I have the most complete skeleton was about two feet high. He lived during the miocene tertiary times.

"My fossils would not warrant me in speaking of more than three hoofs on each foot: the center one on each foot being large, and the other ones small. Each fetlock bone furnished him with what was an external hoof.

"Belonging to a later period, the pliocene, I have other horse remains. The older classification gives the name Hipparion to the pliocene horse. The side hoofs of this animal were still external, and therefore, to some extent, functional. These horses multiplied in species, as well as in numbers, varying in size until the horse proper, or equus, came on the scene with only rudimentary fragments of the metatarsal bones of the side hoofs provided for."

Insects That Walk on Water.

Insects that walk on the water by means of pneumatic floats are the familiar spider and the pond skater. The pond skater really walks on pneumatic floats. There are tiny hairs on the feet of this insect, so fine that they cannot be seen, that are arranged to collect air. The amount collected in and about these hairs is sufficient to allow the insects to walk or float on the surface of the water. As each foot is put down it forms a cuplike depression, or tiny pit, in the water. The foot does not sink, because the air bubble that has been formed is too light to let it. A fine covering of hair protects the water spider, too, and even if it is submerged in the water it is never really wet: the hair keeps a layer of air between its body and the water. It looks like a white pearl when below the surface.

An early find of mastodon bones from Shawangunk, Ulster county, New York, was presented to the University of Virginia by Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States, who, like Theodore Roosevelt, twenty-sixth president, was an enthusiastic naturalist. It is noted by natural history that after the great transcontinental glacier receded large marshes were left in the region where these bones were unearthed, and in them these animals frequently became mired. Both Ulster and Orange counties have been prolific in mastodon remains. The Warren mastodon, dug up near Newburg in 1845, and now in the American museum, is the most perfect skeleton so far found. Bones are frequently turned up by farmers, and the specimens have even included hair, long, dense and shaggy, and of dark golden-brown color.

A new schedule will go into effect on the Westside street railway beween Charleroi and Ellsworth, to take effect on Monday the first of December. Under the new time table cars will run leave Fifth street, Charleroi at 4:45, 6:15, 7:45, 9:15 and 10:45 a. m., and 12:15, 1:45, 3:15, 4:45, 6:30, 8:00, 9:30 and 11:00 p. m. They will arrive from Ellsworth at 6:10, 7:40, 9:10, 10:40 a. m., and 12:10, 1:40, 3:10, 4:40, 6:10, 7:55, 9:25, 10:55 p. m. and 12:25 a. m. The running time between Charleroi is 40 minutes.

Patrons of the line will notice that cars do not leave the Charleroi terminal on the hour as formerly but that one and one-half hours elapses between the departures of trolleys for Bentelyville and Ellsworth. A feature to notice is that up until the 4:45 car the trolley leaves either at 15 minutes to or 15 minutes after the scheduled hour; than cars leave at 6:30, 8:00, 9:30 and 11:00 o'clock.

RED CROSS SEAL FUNDS MANY USES

State and Local Tuberculosis Societies Carry on Much Constructive and Definite Work.

Proceeds from the sale of Red Cross Seals finance the fight on Tuberculosis. This work in Pennsylvania is carried on under the direction of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. This association has local organizations in many localities which conducted the community work.

The largest proportion of the money coming from the sale of seals stays in the community in which the seals are sold. A small portion goes to the State Society.

The State Society and its associated branches carry on a definite and constructive work for eradicating the white plague and the improving of the public health.

Following are the uses to which Red Cross Seal funds are applied:

Aiding in the work of the Pennsylvania Society, which has a constructive program for the prevention of tuberculosis, and organizes, co-ordinates and unifies measures for the fulfillment of the program.

Co-operating with the state department of health, particularly in the bureau of Tuberculosis Sanatoria, the local tuberculosis dispensaries, and the state health exhibit; and with local departments of health, for the promotion of all forms of anti-tuberculosis work.

Carrying on direct educational work as to the nature, treatment and prevention of tuberculosis, such educational work being addressed to securing the adoption of definite community activities in the anti-tuberculosis campaign.

Propaganda efforts for the establishment and operation by public authorities of survey, nursing, clinic, hospital, sanatorium, day or night camp, open-air school or class, or other kindred agencies.

Educational and other work for safeguarding infants, school children, industrial employes, and others from tuberculosis infection, and for increasing their powers of resistance to such infection.

Looking after men rejected in the draft because they had tuberculosis and also soldiers leaving the army with impaired health. Names have been secured from the surgeon general's office and tuberculosis workers are hunting out these men.

Employment of nurses for tuberculosis surveys or for assisting and nursing the sick, securing admission to hospitals and sanatoria, giving instruction in the home for safeguarding other members of the family and the public.

Aiding in the work and development of the state dispensaries for the diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis, demonstrating the need of, and, if necessary, temporarily operating open-air schools or fresh-air classes for children.

Establishment and, if need be, temporary operation of preventoria for pre-tuberculous cases, or children's divisions of sanatoria or hospitals.

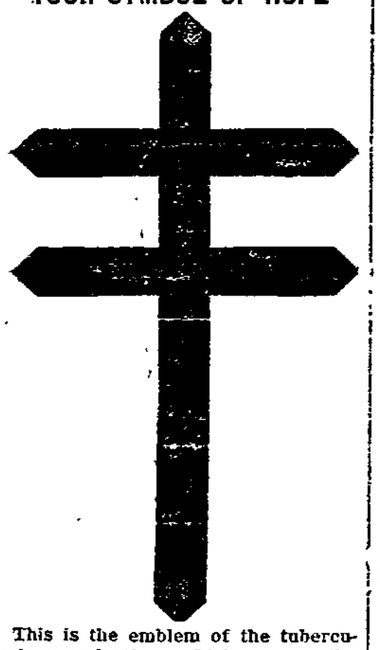
In an emergency, payment in whole or in part for maintenance of patients in hospitals or sanatoria.

After-care, that is, advice, employment, and relief of patients leaving sanatoria as arrested and cured.

Relief, of whatever medical or material form may be needed for families in which there is a case of tuberculosis which cannot be placed in a hospital.

Relief which may be needed to enable a patient who is a breadwinner or care-taker of a family to accept hospital care.

YOUR SYMBOL OF HOPE



This is the emblem of the tuberculosis organizations which sponsor the sale of Red Cross Seals at the Christmas season. In this state the organization is the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, which has affiliated societies in many communities.

THE WHY AND WHAT OF RED CROSS SEALS

The Red Cross Seal, as known in America, was originated in 1907 by Miss Emily P. Bissell, of Wilmington, Delaware.

The first seals were sold in 1908 in a few communities, including Wilmington, Philadelphia and a few other places in Pennsylvania.

The seal is a small stamp that is generally placed on letters and packages around the holidays as a messenger of health and good cheer. It cannot be used as postage.

Red Cross Seals sell for one cent each.

Proceeds from seals are used to fight tuberculosis and improve the public health.

The seal this year is printed in blue and green. Santa, in red stands over a chimney with his pack ready to descend. The seal bears the emblems of the Red Cross and the tuberculosis societies. The season's greetings, "Merry Christmas," "Health and a Happy New Year," are printed thereon.

The sale of Red Cross Seals and Health Bonds begins December 1.

WHITE PLAGUE MOST DEADLY

Of all plagues that have afflicted the world none is more deadly than tuberculosis, the "Great White Plague." Other plagues, ancient and modern, swept a country or community, struck down victims for a few weeks, months, or years, and were gone. Tuberculosis has kept up its ravages for more than 4000 years.

Here in the United States tuberculosis kills 150,000 persons every year. One person dies every three minutes, 20 very hour, 480 every day.

There are at least 1,000,000 active cases of tuberculosis in the United States.

No close estimate of the number of inactive cases can be made. The health demonstration at Framingham, Mass., where a whole city put itself in the care of physicians in order to promote health and further scientific investigation, has revealed that there are 15 cases of tuberculosis for every death. This would indicate a total of over 2,000,000 cases, 1,000,000 of which are probably inactive.

Inactive cases may at any time be transformed into active cases by weakness due to some other disease, or by a cold, or some unusual physical strain.

A PLEA FOR THE STATE'S CHILDREN

Among the 150,000 persons who are killed by tuberculosis in the United States every year are more than 12,000 children, under five years of age.

Tuberculosis is a preventable disease. Therefore the nation is not taking the proper care of its children.

Government reports show that nearly half of the child victims of tuberculosis succumb to tuberculosis meningitis.

It is not true that these children inherited the disease. Science has demonstrated that tuberculosis is a communicable disease, caused by a germ transmitted after birth.

Children are particularly susceptible to infection. More than 50 per cent of all children are infected before they are ten years of age, and the percentage increases until at 15 it reaches 60 to 70 per cent, and at 21 practically everyone is infected.

Once the bacilli of tuberculosis have found lodgment the disease may manifest itself at any time in after life.

The power of the child to resist the disease can be built up by fresh air and sunshine and good food. Special educational facilities in this respect are provided by the Modern Health Crusade, an organization for children that teaches right methods of living. The public can help by giving the little ones clean streets and sidewalks and well-kept parks.

A consumptive parent may pass the disease to a child with a kiss, or by carelessness in spitting or sneezing.

THE HEALTH CRUSADERS

The Modern Health Crusade has been established in many schools of Pennsylvania. This work provides eleven reasons why tuberculosis is being reduced in this country. Tuberculosis hates sunshine and cleanliness. It cannot live in fresh air or where there is regular exercise. Modern Health Crusaders perform eleven chores every week, learn the value of fresh air and exercise and are helping to banish the white plague. This work among school pupils is resulting in making healthier and happier children and the result will be seen in the improved health of the next generation. One of the missions of the Red Cross Seal is to enlist more Health Crusaders.

DEATH LAID TO EVIL SPIRITS

Bangalas Tribe in Africa Refuses to Believe That Mortal Dissolution Is Certain.

Strange rites and ceremonies still abound in Africa. Most of these have their origin in superstitions instigated by the medicine men or magicians of a tribe for their own betterment, while many are adopted as customs of a tribe.

Foremost of the funeral "celebrations" in Africa is that of a tribe called Bangalas, near the Quango river. Here the deceased is asked to state the cause of his death, and is often prosecuted before being buried.

The death of an African in these sections is never announced, and, only on inquiry is anyone told of the death of a tribe member. When the death is generally known the relatives come and fall into a state of excitement and wailings, with frequent interruptions of a hilarious nature. Drums and musical instruments are assembled and the revelry is continued until after sunrise. This ceremony occupies two days. The body is brought out during these ceremonies and fastened in a sitting posture in a chair and placed at the door of his hut. The idea of the natives is that the deceased shall share in the festivities.

Only the mother and wife of the deceased show signs of grief. After the "celebrations" the deceased is put under rigid examination as to what or who caused his death. Naturally, he is unable to answer, and the crowd abuses him, demanding an answer. At last it is agreed that he was killed through the aid of evil spirits. The body is then taken to the cemetery.

The inhabitants do not believe that everyone must die, that evil spirits alone interfere with lives.

ISLAND OF MANY MEMORIES

Visitor to St. Helena Almost Sure to Find Something to Remind Him of Home.

St. Helena, the island where Napoleon Bonaparte spent some six years of exile and where he died in 1821, has one of the most peculiar landscapes in the world, and by reason of the great variety of trees and plants that grow there.

For many years the island was a sort of ocean crossroads where all ships plying between Europe and the East stopped for supplies. It was uninhabited when discovered and most of its population is made up of the descendants of persons who deserted from passing vessels. European, African and Asiatic peoples are all represented.

Nearly all of these settlers of many races and nationalities tried to introduce into the island plants and trees from their home countries, as people are wont to do the world over. Some of these failed to survive, but a surprising variety of crops and trees throve in the semi-tropical climate and rich soil of the little island. As a result the English oak tree today grows beside bananas and palms. Raising dates is an industry of the valleys, while Scotch pines grow on the uplands, and some of the level land is covered with English gorse. Lemon and orange trees are to be found not far from patches of bramble and groves of willow. A visitor from almost any part of the world may look about and find a bit of landscape to remind him of home.—"Niksah," in Chicago News.

Electric Lamp Best for Mines.

Nowadays the up-to-date miner carries a package of electricity about with him while underground. It is a small storage battery attached to the back of his belt, and is connected by a cord with a lamp fastened to the front of his cap. The lamp, provided with a reflector, throws a flood of light in front of the miner. But its chief advantage is absolute safety. In olden days miners (who must, of course, have light) carried about with them open-flame lamps. These caused innumerable disastrous accidents through ignition of coal dust or gases. Sir Humphry Davy's invention of a safety lamp whose flame was protected by a wire gauze saved an immense number of lives. It is in common use today, but the electric mine lamp is better and more convenient.

The Caspian sea is the largest inland sea in the world. It has an area exceeding 170,000 square miles, and it is situated between Europe and Asia to the southeast of Russia. It lies in a deep depression, and in a past age, geologists tell us, probably formed with the Black and Aral seas, an inland sea of vast extent. Salmon and sturgeon are abundant and the seal fishery is important.

The rivers Ural and Volga flow into it. Astrabad Baku and Astrakhan are its chief ports. Waterways, consisting of rivers and canals, connect it with the Black and Baltic seas. Of its area, 365 square miles belong to the islands. At the present time its surface lies 86 feet below the level of the ocean.—Detroit News.

Sensible Decision.

"Wasn't your new French maid competent?" asked Mrs. Gawker.

"Oh, yes," replied Mrs. Bounderby.

"Then, why did you discharge her?"

"The first time Mr. Bounderby saw her I caught him glancing at himself in a mirror and readjusting his tie. I may have lost my girlish beauty, but, thank heaven, I haven't lost my brains."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS ENTERTAINS FOR MEMBERS WHO SAW SERVICE

Banquet Features Reception At Washington Ave. Church

ENJOYABLE PROGRAM GIVEN

The Men's Bible Class of the Washington Avenue Presbyterian church did themselves proud Friday evening, when they entertained at a banquet the service men of the church. The same spirit that characterized the class work of relief during war days was shown in the exercises last night Undertaking to serve the boys themselves the men found pleasure in planning a pleasant evening and working out their own plans. Many culinary experts were discovered who could serve turkey with all the trimmings prepared for a King's taste. The room was decorated in keeping with the occasion, with the national colors much in evidence.

The diners sat down at 8 o'clock to a menu which consisted of turkey, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce cold slaw, olives, pickles, pumpkin pie, ice cream and cake and following the supper there was a literary and musical program.

The first speaker was Major H. J. Repman, who told of his experiences across seas. A quartet from the class composed of Eddie Miller, John F. Bowman, Dr. J. W. Manon and Van Speers, then contributed a vocal number. The next speaker was Major Edwin McKay who discussed the military bills before Congress.

The entire audience then sang "The Long, Long Trail," and "Keep the Home Fires Burning," after which Captain Edwin Patton spoke on his camp experience.

There were two vacant chairs entwined with flags in memory of the two who died during the war, Raymond Craft and Arden Calvert. A beautiful memorial service was held, conducted by Rev. Burson, who pinned two white flowers over the gold stars on the service flag.

Members of the class who served as waiters were all dressed in white suits and made a neat appearance. They were, James Dawson, Ell. Metz, J. W. Kimmins, Eddie Miller, Bert Mitchell, Lynn Robertson, Stewart McKean, Clifford Robertson, Tom Hudspith, Joseph Steck, Dr J. W. Manon and Lauren Tope. Much credit for the successful evening was due to the central committee composed of J. W. Kimmins and Mont. Robertson.

The following original poem was contributed by Rev. Burson for the occasion:

They died as a soldier. I tell you,
The death dew that circled their brow,
Was brought at the altar of freedom,
Therefore we honor them now.

They had visions and dreams before them,
But these they gladly gave,
That Liberty's banner might be unfurled
Though their path led to the grave

Tonight, our circle is broken,
Their memories we will revere,
Of other hours, other days.
When they mingled with us here.

While we drink the cup of sorrow,
Our spirits shall not fail,
For we recount heroic deeds,
That are not an idle tale.

But enshrined in memory's casket,
With jewels rich and grand,
We'll pledge a new allegiance,
Till we meet in a better land.

Instant Death of Donora Boy While Examining A Revolver

A very distressing accident, which resulted in the death of Robert Adair, the 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Adair, occurred Friday afternoon about 4:45 o'clock at the home of James P. Castner, in Donora. The Adair boy, in company with Jas. Castner aged 12, was up stairs in the Castner homee inflating toy balloons with gas. James Castner was filling the balloons when the Adair boy was attracted by a rifle which Mr. Castner had laid out prior to leaving today on a hunting trip. The boy picked it up and was examining it, when young James Castner told him to lay it down, as his father did not allow any handling of the guns. The Adair boy laid the gun down, but a moment later as events proved, picked up a revolver. He was also admonished to put that down, young Castner in the meantime keeping at the task of filling the balloons. Suddenly he was startled by a shot and turning saw young Adair fall to the floor. With the aid of his brother Lewis, James Castner carried the boy over to his home, near the Castner residence, and Dr. Lewis was summoned. When the physician arrived he found that the boy was dead as the bullet had gone through his heart.

The accident has cast quite a gloom over Donora, where both boys are well known, as well as both families. Mr. Adair, the father of the dead boy, is cashier of the Bank of Donora, while Mr. Castner is connected with the Union Trust company.

FAILS TO MAKE CASE AGAINST PHYSICIAN

Before Judge McIlvaine in court at Washington on Friday the case of John Pfite against Dr. Alden O. Davis of Charleroi was called. Damages were sought for alleged malpractice in caring for a broken leg for the plaintiff. The claim was that the doctor in placing a cast was careless in the method of placing it, it is averred, causing so the plaintiff said serious lacerations on the leg. However the court gave binding instructions for the defense.

Jack Hetrick, son of Dr. and Mrs. B. D. Hetrick had his leg broken when he fell Friday. Mrs. Hetrick and son were visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Ned Scott of Tyrone.

SCHOLARSHIP AT STATE COLLEGE IN HONOR OF LIEUT. LEVI LAMB

Fund Raised to Carry Out This Plan by Former Graduates

WILL BE PERPETUAL MEMORIAL

The memory of Levi L. Lamb, and of "Red" Bebout, former Penn State gridiron stars, who made the supreme sacrifice on the battlefields of France, will be perpetuated with scholarships. At a meeting held Wednesday evening by the Pittsburg Alumni Association of Pennsyvania State College, at the Fort Pitt Hotel a fund of $10,000 was raised with which to endow the Bebout and Lamb scholarships.

The scholarships will be awarded to athletes with scholastic credits who are unable to pay their own way through college. Under the plans outlined the scholarships will be awarded to the successful candidates by a committee of five made up of former Penn State students. The first scholarship will be known as the Bebout scholarship and the second as the Lamb scholarship. The first student will be sent to State next fall, and after four years there will be four athletes receiving free education. All of the students sent there under the endowment will have all of their expenses paid, including an allowance for living expenses.

Bebout was killed in the Argonne in October, 1918, being an officer in the 318th Infantry, Eightieth Division.

Lamb, who was a Second Lieutenant in Co. K., Ninth U. S. Infantry, was killed on the 18th of July, 1918, south of Soissons, the day the American offensive began during the second battle of the Marne. He enlisted at Ft. Snelling, Minn., on the 9th of April, 1917, at that time being coach and an instructor in the Jamestown, North Dakota, High school. Prior to that time he had been an instructor and coach at the Hamilton High school in Boston. Lieut. Lamb was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lamb of California and was a graduate of State College, where he made a great record in athletics.

TAGS FOR MOTOR VEHICLES READY

B. J. G. Eynon, Registrar of Motor Vehicles for the State Highway Department, has announced that the shipment of license tags for motor vehicles for 1920 will begin on or before December 15. He urged that automobile owners make haste in filing their applications for registration.

"We estimate that by January 1, 1920, we will have licensed 200,000 passenger cars, 30 000 commercial cars and 300.000 drivers and operators," said Mr. Eynon today. "We do not at this time believe that it will be necessary for any extension of time to the motorists of Pennsylvania because of failure of this Department to deliver 1920 license tags. The motorists themselves will aid us in our work if they will make as early an application for registration as is possible. The new form of application is much more complete than that heretofore used. It will require that car owners have an intimate knowledge of their machines. It will be well, therefore, that motorists secure an application as soon as possible so that no time may be lost in filling out the blank."

Applicants for registration of motor vehicles will find that when they appear before notories public, the notary will charge 50c for each affidavit required on the application for registration, instead of 25 cents as heretofore. If the application for registration also desires an owners license to operate a vehicle, two affidavits are necessary. As told, the fee charged by the notary will be 50c for each affidavit. This charge is provided for in the Act of Assembly approved by the Governor July 10, 1919, wherein all notarial fees are increased.

The license tags for 1920 are blue, with white numerals. A hyphen is used to divide the numeral into thousands. The keystone hitherto found on license tags has been done away with Below the numeral will be found the inscription, "Penna, 1920."
